FRRR supports 'Getting into Further Study'

Thinking of further study, but not sure you could do it, or what's expected of you?

Then you should do the 3-day 'Getting into Further Study' short course developed by Rangelands Australia and supported by the Foundation for Rural and Regional Renewal (FRRR).

The course covers:

- Effective learning practices and management of study
- Planning and research for assignments and reports
- Evaluating and using information in assignments and reports
- Structuring your understanding and thinking for assignments and reports
- Writing for easy reading (and marking)
- Effective presentations.

The course content is suitable for anyone thinking of doing a University-level course in agriculture, range management or natural resource management, whatever the institution, and the skills learnt have been very useful in people's local committee roles.

Feedback on the course has included:

- "This course is essential to anyone unfamiliar with postgraduate requirements"
- "I feel more at ease about how to approach tertiary courses"
- "Confident now to embark on uni study"
- "It will save me a lot of time in future study"
- "Excellent value"
- "Still don't know what I don't know, but I'm now well prepared to find out"
- "I found this course very helpful, and it will help me immensely in my work and community roles".

We'll come to you, if you can arrange a group of 5 or more and help us identify a mutually convenient location and time.

The fee is only $150 per person, thanks to support provided by the Foundation for Rural and Regional Renewal (FRRR).
