3. Business arising from the minutes:

A. 2025 IRC bid

- It was decided that there could be a potential conflict of interest with Dana Kelly's present role of chair of the IRC Continuing Committee if she was to be a member of the 2025 IRC Bid Committee.
- No additional people expressed an interest in being on an IRC 2025 Bid Committee.
- Good progress reported by Pieter Conradie (Committee Chair) with
 - 4 centres under consideration – Adelaide, Darwin, Cairns & Townsville
 - Final selection depends in part on the financial packages that are offered by each centre
 - The bid is on track for completion by the October 2019 deadline.
- The ARS provided $10,000 for the bid committee for the Townsville 1999 IRC bid committee.

Motion: That the Australian Rangeland Society underwrites $20,000 to support the 2025 IRC Australian bid. This is to encourage the Australian Government to contribute funding towards the congress. This amount is to be refunded to the ARS after the conference. (Don to action)

Moved: Don Burnside

Seconded: Cathy Waters

Carried

- Briefing documents to Government Departments: Cathy Waters has sent a briefing note to NSW DPI. A copy of this brief to be forwarded to Bob Shepherd & David Phelps to write a similar briefing note to DAFQ requesting in-principle support for IRC 2025. (Cathy, Bob & David to action)

B. ARS Award of Excellence

- Details of the proposed award were sent with the AGM meeting notice to the Range Management Newsletter Editor Noelene Duckett.

C. ARS Conference Canberra 2019

- Compilation of a review paper from a student or early career scientist for inclusion in a subsequent special issue of The Rangeland Journal depends on the papers submitted and the selection of a suitable candidate. Cathy will liaise with Graciela Metternicht (Cathy to action)
- A Drought Management session is on the program for the conference. The role of a range of stakeholders in drought management needs to be highlighted eg shire councils.
- Several people will be attending from Rangelands NRM (WA). Southern Gulf NRM (Qld) is sponsoring landholders. Megan is to notify Bob if any expressions of interest have been received. Bob will approach graziers if additional places are available from Southern Gulf NRM. (Megan & Bob to action)

- Conference registrations - to date 170 registrations received (including 20 day registrations) 51 ARS members, 54 non-members and 10 students. Breakeven numbers are 270.
- Sponsorship – Kate Forrest is approaching sponsors, but availability is tight.
- Prizes & awards
 - CSIRO is providing $1000 for student awards for books or vouchers.
 - Future Earth Australia (Australian Academy of Science) is providing 5 early career prizes.
 - ARS is awarding membership prizes
- The ARS Conference link on the front page of the ARS website needs updating (Bob to approach Russell Grant)

D. TRJ Special Issue - Drought management -

- Contract with the Qld government has been signed at the last Publications Committee meeting. Qld DAF is addressing legal issues that remain with partners. (David Phelps to check on progress)

6.1 Membership Report (Don Burnside, Membership Director)

Membership Update – 6 July 2019

The summary

At the commencement of 2019, there were 209 active and complimentary members. We now have 218.

The detail

As at 6 July 2019, 126 members have paid for annual memberships for 2019, with 12 people who have taken up three year memberships (2019-2021). When added to the members already on three year memberships (31 three year memberships taken up in 2017 and 2018), a total of 171 members – so far – are financial and hence ‘active’ for 2019.

Because we have members now paid up until 31 December 2021, we have taken in additional membership fees – to the value of $4,216.67 (excl of GST).

There are still 21 members (10.9%) who need to renew to maintain their ‘active’ status, and they are being sent monthly reminders. However, several of these are recipients of complimentary memberships for prizes and on past experience, it is unlikely that they will opt to take up a paid membership. This is disappointing.

There is better news about new and returned members – with 12 in this category. Some of these will have taken up memberships to secure concessional registration at the Canberra conference. We hope we can keep them in 2020.

Overall therefore, we have 171* paid members at this time, which compares favourably with 163 for the whole of 2018. Sending reminders to past members, and hassling current un-paid members is an effective strategy.

Discussion from membership report:

- To promote membership at the ARS Biennial Conference in Canberra it was suggested that the conference organisers be approached to:-
 - Include membership application forms in the conference bags.
 - Include membership benefits and a prompt to encourage people to publish in TRJ, in the rolling screen saver on the projection screen (Don to action)

Notes on financial Report

Normal Operations

- Membership income – Membership renewals are coming in well, with 90 per cent paid to date. Monthly reminders will continue to be sent. There have been several new members join in recent months, encouraged presumably by the opportunity for concessional registration for the Canberra conference.
- Marketing and promotion – 50 per cent of the full fee has been paid to Blue Platypus for set-up of the new website. Set-up is proceeding well as discussed in the PC Report. Other costs include back payment to Russell Grant for his editorship of the website in 2018, plus final payment to Wright Social for looking after the social media sites before appointment of the SME.
- Journal expenses – a payment of $1,800 was made to CSIRO Publishing for excess pages (18) in Volume 40 of the Journal. (Our contract is limited to 600 pages). Payment of 50 per cent ($9,091) of the annual publishing fee for the Journal has been made to CSIRO Publishing.
- Honoraria – payment of $2,500 has been made to Ron Hacker, outgoing Chair of the Publications Committee for serves over the year ending 30 June 2019.

Conference income and expenses

- Conference income – consists entirely of registrations to date. As at 28 June, 101 people had registered in one form, or another.
- Conference expenses – Payments are starting to be made to the PCO plus providers of services and conference venues.
- Balance of Conference account – the conference account (8363) includes a $15,000 advance from the ARS savings account.

GST transactions

- To obtain a true picture of the conference finances, an attempt is being made to separate the GST credits and liabilities between normal operations and conference operation.
- In Q2, the conference transactions produced a liability of $4,590. The normal operations transactions generated a credit of $1,157.
- The conference liability was transferred to the operating cheque account and a net payment of $3,433 transferred to the ATO on 9 July 2019.
- The balance of accounts shows the totals after all transfers.

Motion: That the financial report be accepted and accounts passed for payment.

6.3 Publications Committee Report (Ron Hacker, Chair, Publications Committee)

The Publications Committee (PC) met on 8 May and 3 July. As the May meeting preceded the AGM no report has previously been submitted from this meeting. The following matters are forwarded for Council's information and consideration.

a. The Rangeland Journal

Issue 2 of volume 41 has been published and Paul Novelly anticipates that issue 3 will be published by the end of July. This will be the Special Issue from the Port Augusta conference. The number of papers submitted to date in 2019 is well down on numbers in previous years and the quality of many manuscripts has also been low. There is no obvious reason for this situation.

A contract has been signed with NSW DPI for a Special Issue (SI) on management of total grazing pressure in the southern rangelands. It is anticipated that this will be published late in 2019 as part of Volume 41. Plans are progressing for a SI on drought management and policy to be published in 2020 and a draft contract has been submitted to the sponsor, Queensland DPI. The second SI for 2020 is expected to be another volume arising from a Chinese conference on ecological degradation and regeneration of grasslands, to be held in September 2019. The conference is building on a seminal paper on classification of Chinese grasslands published in The Rangeland Journal some years ago. Paul Novelly will attend this conference at the expense of the organisers. He is currently working to develop a more formal process for soliciting special issues from potential sponsors as the current ad hoc process, which relies heavily on the personal networks of PC members, is not considered sustainable.

The Society's primary contact within CSIRO publishing, Dr Jenny Foster, has been replaced by Dr Marisa Spiniello. As part of this internal restructuring CSIRO Publishing will undertake an internal review and strategic planning process for TRJ. The Editor-in-Chief and I participated in a teleconference with Dr Foster and Dr Spiniello on this topic on 3 July. Prior to this we completed a SWOT analysis which is attached as Addendum 1.

The 2018 Impact Factor (1.019) was released in June. This is a small though disappointing reduction compared to 2017 (1.080) and was associated with a drop in the journal's quartile ranking among ecology journals. Details of recent trends in the IF and other statistics are included below (provided by CSIRO Publishing).

	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018
Papers submitted	109	127	125	127	131	127	112
Rejection rate	41%	53%	53%	55%	50%	64%	43%
Papers published (OA)	41 (0)	42 (2)	54 (11)	59 (2)	56 (1)	47 (4)	53 (5)
Pages published	445	455	610	635	618	567	618
Impact Factor (IF)	1.276	1.064	1.096	1.194	1.211	1.080	1.019
5-year IF	1.532	1.365	1.261	1.281	1.262	1.206	1.642
Citation ranking*	95/136	109/141	103/145	107/150	108/153	119/160	133/164
Quartile*	Q3	Q4	Q3	Q3	Q3	Q3	Q4
Immediacy Index	0.171	0.405	0.824	0.638	1.273	0.458	1.038

The reduction is due to the loss of a well-cited Chinese Special Issue from the assessment period, together with a higher proportion of papers from 2016-17 that have not yet been cited. However, it should be noted that this IF, though the one usually quoted, is based on citations of papers published only over the previous two years, a window that is arguably too short for the research areas covered by TRJ in which knowledge turnover is relatively slow. It is therefore pleasing to note that the less quoted 5-year IF is now 1.642, the highest ever achieved by TRJ.

The publicity flyer for TRJ will not be update by CSIRO Publishing incorporating the new impact factors and stressing the 5-year IF.

b. Range Management Newsletter

The RMN continues to maintain its regular publication schedule under the excellent editorship of Noelene Duckett. Progress is being made with implementation of the recommendations endorsed by Council for strategic direction of the newsletter. Noelene is working through the 65 newsletters, websites etc. identified by Council as possible sources of shared information but the shortlist has not yet been circulated to PC for comment. She will consider if assistance is required to produce the RMN (as envisaged in the discussion paper provided to Council) when the list of collaborating organisations is finalised.

c. Web site

The new web site is now being tested by ARS site administrators coordinated by Russell Grant. These include Russell, Noelene Duckett and Don Burnside. The new site looks identical to the current site but some issues of functionality have been identified by testing to date and have been drawn to the attention of Blue Platypus. When testing is finished and the site finally goes live the transition should be virtually seamless to the user.

d. Social media

Sarah Moles maintains regular posting to SM via the scheduling platform Buffer. Data below, provided by Sarah, show that the number of likes and followers is continuing to grow even for Instagram which has been the least active of the SM platforms.

07/05/19	945	1123	257
06/07/19	970	1145	261

The main platforms, Facebook and Twitter, can react very differently to similar posts. A Facebook post about appropriate road building in rural and remote areas was seen by 841 people. On Twitter this post gained 7 likes and 7 retweets. The Twitter version of a post about “Becoming Indigenous: Future cities as a network of waterholes connected by songlines” triggered an email from Buffer advising it had potentially been seen by more than 28,000 viewers. On Facebook it was seen by 91 users but only shared by 2.

Addendum 1: SWOT analysis completed for The Rangeland Journal by Hacker and Novelly, and an analysis of competitive journals completed by Paul Novelly.

Strengths	Weaknesses
Please populate your ideas; some prompts are included below (not exhaustive): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • TRJ has maintained a reasonably steady level of submissions (about 120-130 per year) over the last several years (including submissions from two Special Issues per annum); • Scope is broad and includes socio-economic aspects of rangeland use as well as purely biological – this niche is unique to TRJ (but also has a downside – see weaknesses); • The Impact Factor (1.080-1.276 over the last six years) is probably reasonable for a journal of broad scope (though not high); • The journal has held its ranking among ecological journals over the last 6 years; • The journal attracts submissions from a wide range of countries but mainly from Australia and the Asia-Pacific region (especially China); • Since 2014 TRJ has published two themed Special Issue per year and has published one virtual issue in each of the last two years; papers in special issues often cite well and the rate of downloads from virtual issues is several times higher than normal issues; • Conscientious and efficient Editor-in-Chief, a reasonable set of voluntary Associate Editors (could be expanded) and Advisory Editors; both Associate Editors and Advisory Editors are drawn from a range of countries (though Associate Editors are predominantly Australian); • Strong support from Council of the ARS and the Publications Committee; • Good working relationship with the publisher and its staff; • TRJ is widely known internationally and appears to be well patronised by non-English speaking rangeland scientists (especially Chinese) seeking to publish in English-language journals; • Some retired members of the ARS are prepared to assist voluntarily in English language editing of overseas manuscripts. 	Please populate your ideas; some prompts are included below (not exhaustive): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A broad scope may make the journal less attractive for highly specialised scientists and makes it difficult to achieve a high Impact Factor; • For some Australian scientists the home-grown journal is probably seen as less prestigious than overseas journals • There are few submissions from North America, South America or Europe; • Difficulties in obtaining reviewers and the timeliness of reviews (but this is probably common to many journals today); • The quality of the published product could be improved (e.g. quality of English expression, punctuation and grammatical errors); this is a problem partly related to authors (especially non-English speaking authors) who probably do not adequately proof-read the typeset manuscript, but also partly for the editorial /copy editing process; • Advisory Editors mostly have little input and are not effectively engaged (even though they have a Role Statement) • Work load paced on (essentially) volunteer staff, especially the Editor-in-Chief. • ‘Rangelands’ as a topic does not “resonate” well in Australia, and TRJ tends to be considered less ‘ecological’ than other journals.

Opportunities	Threats

Please populate your ideas; some prompts are included below (not exhaustive): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Generate more submissions from regions with currently low submission levels (but how?); • Actively solicit papers, esp. review papers, from leading scientists; TRJ has not been active in this field to date; • Find a means of more pro-actively engaging with Advisory Editors (or else maybe scrap the idea of Advisory Editors) • Review of the editorial structure of the journal given the demands now placed on (essentially voluntary) staff (especially Editor-in-Chief) • Forge stronger links with organizations or entities that are not linked directly to a specific journal, but ensure quality of manuscripts. 	Please populate your ideas; some prompts are included below (not exhaustive): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Inability to maintain flow of special issues (for which the ARS charges $10,000 +GST); relatively few scientists or institutions outside China have the capacity to meet this cost • Inability to maintain an annual flow of themed virtual issues (as this basically requires additional voluntary effort to identify suitable material); • Disgruntled ARS membership (mostly Australian) due to dominance of overseas papers in their journal (this is inevitable given the state of rangeland research in Australia but may make the journal unattractive to some members). • Quality of submissions (especially from overseas) is often low (in terms of both English and science); there is a dilemma about how much effort voluntary staff can devote to polishing these to make them acceptable; • Inability to attract a high quality operator to the position of Editor-in-Chief when the incumbent eventually retires. • There is a steady decline in Australian rangeland research. This is having a strong impact on the number of Australian manuscripts received, which, apart from the point noted above, also leads to fewer submissions because one's colleagues (for grad students in particular) are publishing elsewhere. • There is a constant trade-off between manuscript quality (no matter how much the manuscript is edited) and sufficient accepted manuscripts to maintain the publication schedule. This is self-defeating, but necessary.

Five competitor journals utilised by authors of The Rangeland Journal (TRJ)

- See summary below No. 5

1. Journal: Rangeland Ecology and Management (REM) [formally Journal of Range Management].
Comments: Really the “go to” journal for rangelanders in North America (particularly the USA). It is linked to the US Society for Range Management (SRM), as TRJ is to the ARS, but the SRM is far larger and more proactive than the ARS, there are far more SRM members and there are far greater links between the SRM and REM. REM certainly has a higher profile in US rangeland agencies and academia than TRJ's profile in Australia. Additionally, the far larger number of Universities in the US with “rangeland faculties” (or at least departments) and the far greater number of rangeland graduate students provides a far more consistent stream of research projects and hence manuscripts. It has an Impact Factor of >2.

2. Journal: Austral Ecology (AE)
Comments: Generally, I see AE as TRJ's Australian competition. Since AE is the “southern hemisphere” journal, it has fewer problems with the English language. Being called “Ecology”, I believe it resonates better with ‘ecologists’. It certainly has a higher Impact Factor than TRJ (around 1.7 – but I don't know enough about Impact Factors to know if getting from 1.1 to 1.7 is a big deal), but I assume that is also a drawback.

3. Journal: Journal of Ecology (JE)
Comments: The JE is one of the “high powered” ecology-focussed journals as its scope is far more limited than TRJ, dealing solely with ecological aspects, as opposed to the far broader, perhaps too broad, scope of TRJ. Consequently, the ‘ecologists’ choose it, although the far higher Impact Factor (in excess of 5) ensures that authors would far prefer to publish there than in TRJ. So, JE will continue to get the cream.

4. Journal: Journal of Arid Environments (JAE)
Comments: This is a direct, international competitor for TRJ. It has a significantly higher Impact Factor than TRJ (around 1.8 to 1.9 I think) and competes successfully for Australian manuscripts that would be most suitable for TRJ (including for manuscripts from ARS members). It is interesting that several members of the ARS Publications Committee and TRJ are also associated with the JAE. It may be useful to speak to them about relative effectiveness. For example, JAE is published by Elsevier which provides substantial (although generic, on-line) support for authors. How effective is that in attracting manuscripts? Perhaps ask the relevant members of the Publications Committee.

5. Journal: Australian Journal of Botany (AJB)

Comments: I see this as a major competitor for those very high quality botanical articles relevant to the rangelands which, if TRJ could 'capture' them, would substantially improve both manuscript quality and, I believe, the Impact Factor. Why doesn't TRJ 'capture' them? I think part of it is history, and part is simply prestige. And, in my opinion, as long as AJB is "out there", TRJ's chances of getting these articles is minimal at best. Surprisingly, however, the Impact Factor of AJB (around 1.1 to .2) is only slightly higher than that of TRJ, perhaps because of a limited readership (it's a pretty esoteric journal, but I enjoy reading it).

Summary:

It's a bit of a "punt" deciding what journals to choose for comparison. I know of several South American journals such as the Revista Brasileira de Zootecnia (Brazil) and the Revista Argentina De Producción Animal (Argentina) that will continue to "harness" much of the South American research. The former publishes in both Portuguese and English, the latter solely in Spanish. Both are linked to a Society, the Brazilian Society being quite strong and very active. My experience suggests that they are simply the "go to" journals for both authors and readers in South America, and I doubt that TRJ could logically mount a challenge to attract their authors. If the authors move to another journal, they normally choose REM, as many, if not most, have done their graduate studies at US Universities. The African Journal of Range and Forage Science (formerly The Journal of the Grassland Society of Southern Africa) has a similar role to the South American journals in Southern and Eastern Africa in particular, publishes in English, but has a lower (<1) Impact Factor than TRJ. It has strong links to an active Society and an active and quite scientific rangeland community to draw on, and I think that's always important.

TRJ does appear to be one of the "go to" journals for the Chinese. I guess potential authors see a significant number of Chinese region manuscripts published in TRJ and decide we are a good option, and while I don't 'follow' Chinese literature, I doubt we have much competition in China. While much of the Chinese research (if not the manuscripts) is competent, there is often little or no "broader relevance" provided in the manuscripts (although this is constantly asked for in the review process). And this is also true of manuscripts from Africa and the Middle East. I think it's one of the reasons Australian TRJ readers often criticise the number of "overseas" manuscripts (see Ron's comment in SWOT analysis). The research is simply not relevant or, if 'relevant', is new for the authors' location, but 'old hat' for Australian readers. Again, what is the solution? Push too hard on "relevance" and loose manuscripts and struggle to meet the page requirements.

Based on my choice of journals above, I see TRJ as a good, broad scope journal, but probably considered fairly 'pedestrian' by authors with respect to its competitors, focussing on rangeland topics in the most general terms, and based in a society (ARS) with low and fairly stagnant membership.

Discussion from Publications Committee report:

- The Rangeland Journal
 - While the Impact Factor (IF) has declined over recent years, the 5 year IF is increasing. Possible causes of the decline are:-
 - Reduction in the number of rangeland scientists in Australia
 - Reduction in the number of R&D projects being conducted; although rangeland R&D is comparatively stronger in Qld and the NT.
 - Rangelands based regional NRM groups have experienced declining funding in recent years and are therefore attracting less rangeland scientists/projects.
 - TRJ is in the "ecology" category. If it was moved to the "agriculture" category, it is predicted that the IF would either remain static or rise slightly
 - The IF for the US based journals is higher due to higher population
 - ARS could increase the focus on universities where there are several rangeland relevant projects underway which are producing scientific papers.
 - There are fewer papers with direct applied relevance for rangelands based land owners/managers. This may increase with plans to increase this type of article in the RMN.

- Council could stop TRJ and develop a publication with a different format that has greater practical content and relevance for land managers.
- This would be a useful topic of discussion at the Canberra conference.
- Social Media
 - The number of posts needs to increase with a focus on human interest and novel content. Bios from ARS council members would provide worthwhile content.
 - Most of the ARS council members are not of the “SM generation” therefore their social media skills are lacking
 - The August 2018 “Review of the Use of Social Media by the Australian Rangeland Society” by Ron Hacker & Heidi Wright (Wright Social) was discussed by Council.

Motion: That the following recommendations from the August 2018 “Review of the Use of Social Media by the Australian Rangeland Society” by Ron Hacker & Heidi Wright (Wright Social) be accepted; namely:-

1. That the objectives for the Society’s social media activity remain unchanged.
2. That the Social Media Engagement Strategy 2015-17 be updated for 2018-20, retaining the basic elements of the original strategy but incorporating those of the following recommendations which are accepted by Council.
3. That our ISP be asked to provide detailed information on web site page usage on a regular basis (say 6-monthly).
4. That the SME utilise current content from the web site (e.g. TRJ Abstracts, RMN articles) as a basis for social media posts as frequently as possible (consistent with Pillar 1 of the content strategy – ARS-centric stories).
5. That the SME provide an abridged version of the current report format for each PC meeting.
6. That the arrangement with Wright Social be reviewed in October 2018 and that PC (at its meeting on 7 November) make a recommendation to Council for decision at its November meeting.
7. That PC prepares a profile of ARS for submission to Wikipedia after Council approval.
8. That Council establish a Facebook Ad account, to be used at the discretion of the SME to promote specific posts, and install Facebook Pixel at the ARS web site.
9. That Council supports the SME to develop a weekly series based on personal profiles to boost engagement and increase relevancy among current and future membership.
10. That Council supports the SME to actively seek original and relevant content by promoting opportunities for students to contribute articles to the ARS web site/social media with annual prizes to be won.
11. That the SME aim to increase the posting frequency to Facebook to 5 days a week.
12. That ARS host Internet forums on specific topics, moderated by the SME or a guest moderator, when opportunities arise.
13. That ARS, through the SME, take steps to incorporate social media icons into email signatures and official stationery.
